Grant's Narrow Escape from Being Bucked and Gagged by an Indiana Colonel,

EDITOR NATIONAL TRIBUNE: We were among the first to don the Kearny badge, which was the first army badge worn in the Army of the Potomac, and for which was afterward substituted the Red Diamond. When Gen. Grant took command of the army, impudent familiarity upon the part of the rebeis during our 34 months' service had wrought great changes in our regiment, and William L. To say the least, the boys were leg-weary, and when a temporary check was caused, the boys dropped in their tracks for a momentary rest. During one of those periods Gen. Grant, dressed in a nel, seeing this, indignantly called out:

Proposed Bennion at St. Louis. Shipmates, shoy! It is now definitely settled that the next National Encampment, G.A. nally agreed upon. It is suggested that at the same time and place there be held also a Reunion of naval veterans. Now, shipmates, here is a chance; what say you? The central location of St. Louis; the cordial reception that cerof transportation promised, all seem to combine to make the time and place peculiarly appro-

There were 121,954 enlistments in the navy of us yet left to make the proposed Reunion a success in every way. Let us try it anyhow, and most annually hereafter in connection with each National Eucampment, if agreeable to all interested, as nearly all of us belong to the Order, and are interested in its success. Now, let us hear from you. Don't speak quite so loud as you did at Port Royal under DuPont, or at New Orleans under Farragut. Ohio's Soldier Orator Turned Loose Among the Veterans of Kansas.

EDITOR NATIONAL TRIBUNE: It may not be amiss to let the boys know how we respect old veterans when they chance to drop in amongst us of Kansas, the soldier State of the Union. Gen. W. H. Gbson, the soldier orator of Ohio, has been addressing assemblies of old soldiers in different parts of the State. A few days ago he was on his way from Ottawa to Peabody, and it was necessary for him to pass through our thriving city. Fortunately for us he was compelled to lie over. Being tired he quietly hid himself away at the hotel. Capt. D. A. Taylor, 113th Ohio; Capt. J. C. Watson, 126th Ohio, and your obedient servant, while perambulating about the city dropped into the office of the hotel. The ever-watchful eye of Capt. Taylor espied the signature of "W. H.

This being Post night we formed ourselves into a Committee of Arrangements and proceeded on a scouting expedition to notify the G.A.R. boys what was in the wind. In about 20 minutes we mustered at our Post room about 100 old "coffee coolers." After attending to the preliminary business of the Post we formed in line and marched to the hotel. The register was again examined, and it was found that the old hero was in room 110, third floor, away in the remotest quarter of the building. He thought be was safe from intrasion, but we went up and very politely applied our knockers to the door. We failed to attract any attention and were about to give it up, when we were agreeably surprised to hear a sound com- tied over the barrel in which we had our flour; ing through the transom, which sounded like a steamboat on the Ohio River.

"You can't fool me," said Capt. Taylor; that's Bill Gibson." Making known our errand we assisted in

Observations By a Member of Duryea's Zonaves. EDITOR NATIONAL TRIBUNE: I would like to write a few lines about the battle of Frederthat each and every one notify some one of the | icksburg. I saw an account a few weeks ago following as to their address, so that invitations may be sent them: Gen. O. M. Poe, Prosius into the river. My regiment, the 5th N. dent, 34 Congress street west; W. J. Handy, Y.—Duryea's Zonaves—covered the retreat. Secretary, Michigan Mutual Life Insurance After the opening of the battle Sykes, with the Co.; and Committee on Transportation, J. C. | Second Division of the Fifth Corps, marched over into the city and out to support some troops ahead of us. While Gen. Warren was riding down our line in front of us a shot from the rebels took the heads off two soldiers in our front. I saw the men stand up for a second without heads. A hot place it was, and the "Red Legs," or "Red Devils," as they used to call us, made a good mark for the rebel gun-

We did not remain long, but marched back to the city and camped behind the hospital. The boys had a good time cooking and baking pancakes. One of the boys mixed up some plaster of paris, but he soon found that he had made a mistake. I was detailed to go to the The survivors of the old 94th N. I got it on my back and two men took hold behind to hold it in place and push me up the hill. It was a heavy load, and I would not like to carry it now, We got out on Courtland street, near the hospital, and the Commissary struck a light to see the scale. The rebels opened on his lights, and he did not scratch any more matches

The night the army retreated our companies-A and E-went on the skirmish-line. On the way Gen. Warren told Col. Winslow to take his little bells off his spurs. We had gone but a little way, when the rebels opened fire on us. Capt. Whitney took us on all-fours over to the tannery. The rebels had one corner D. L. About 3 o'clock in the morning two officers came along and told our Captain they belonged to the 2d Mass., and wanted to bring their men on the picket-line. They went in the tannery, and then our Adjutant, Lieut. Guthrie, came on his hands and knees. Crawling up to Capt. Whitney he told him to bring us in at once, as there were two rebel spiesthe men who had claimed to be Massachusetts officers. The Captain told me to run, and I did not stop until I got behind the wall in the graveyard. They all got in safe. The artillery mufiled their wheels and pulled out, and we soon fell back to an old tobacco warehouse. -Andrew P. Fox, Co. A, 5th N. Y., Cincin-
